

About the GIS Data Survey

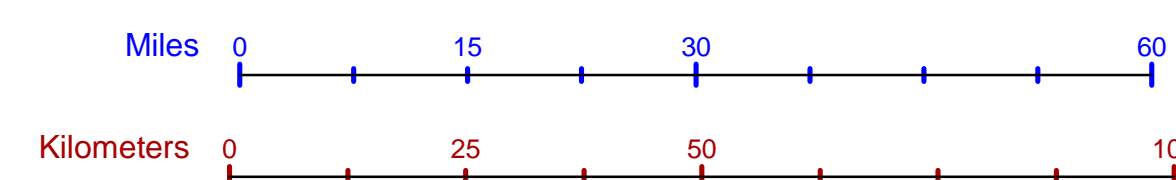

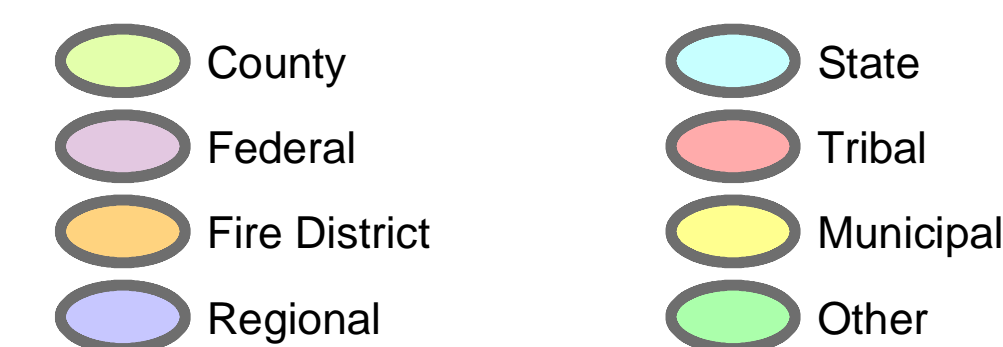

The goal of the AGIC Homeland Security Committee is to enhance the ability of all Arizona agencies to respond to and recover from a terrorist attack or natural disaster. This can be accomplished through the systematic creation and use of accurate and credible geospatial information from federal, state, tribal, regional, county, and local governments and the private sector. Geographic Information System (GIS) technology is the best tool to pull together data to enable Arizona to prepare for and quickly respond to acts or threats of terrorism, natural disasters, and for public safety, health and welfare. The AGIC Homeland Security Committee produced a survey of GIS users in Arizona with the assistance of a grant from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). The purpose of this survey is to build the foundation for GIS data and knowledge sharing for homeland security and other emergency response purposes in Arizona by identifying producers and users of geospatial data in Arizona and individuals who can serve as a point of contact for different organizations. The survey was conducted between May and November 2003.
